CHAPTER 1

INTRODUCTION

Film making is a creative form of visual communication that combines storytelling, acting, cinematography, sound, lighting and editing to communicate an idea or experience to an audience. A short film presents a complete story within a limited duration, making it important to develop a clear concept and use every scene effectively. Radio podcasting, on the other hand, communicates stories through audio elements such as narration, dialogue, music, sound effects and silence. Both forms require creativity, planning and effective storytelling.

The project titled “REUNION” is a short emotional drama developed as part of the Film Making and Radio Podcasting course. The story begins with a familiar and relatable situation in which a young man named Arun walks through the city with his resume, hoping for a job. He checks his phone and sees unanswered messages and rejection emails. He then calls his old friends and asks whether they know of any openings, but each of them politely avoids helping him.

The story takes a hopeful turn when Arun unexpectedly meets his former college senior, Karthik, at a bus stop. Karthik notices that something is wrong, listens to him without judgement and offers to send his resume to a company that is hiring. With this help, Arun attends the interview and receives the good news. The film ends with Arun meeting Karthik again, thanking him, and being reminded to help others in the same way one day.

The project is designed not only as a visual short film but also as a story that can be adapted into a radio podcast. The visual elements of the film can be replaced by narration, voice acting, sound effects and background music in the podcast version.

CHAPTER 2

PROJECT OVERVIEW

The main idea of REUNION is to show that in a person's hardest time, help may come from the least expected place. The first part of the film intentionally appears discouraging and realistic. The audience sees the main character searching for a job and being ignored by the friends he once trusted. This familiar situation helps the audience connect with the character and share his disappointment.

After the repeated rejections, the atmosphere gradually changes. The unexpected voice calling his name at the bus stop creates the first moment of surprise. The honest conversation with Karthik introduces hope, the montage shows the second chance being turned into progress, and the final scene at sunset gives the audience a feeling of gratitude and emotional satisfaction.

The film uses simple locations such as a city road, a small tea shop and a bus stop, a small number of characters and easily available objects such as a mobile phone and a resume file. This makes the project practical to produce while still allowing different film-making techniques to be demonstrated.

CHAPTER 3

TITLE – REUNION

The title “REUNION” is directly connected to the central idea of the story. At the beginning, a reunion refers to the chance meeting between Arun and his old college senior, Karthik, after many years. Two people who had lost contact suddenly find each other again in a crowded place.

However, the meaning of the title becomes deeper as the story continues. The final moral of the film explains that a true reunion is not only meeting someone from the past, but meeting someone who never forgot us. The title therefore acts as both a reference to the physical meeting of two friends and a symbol of hope, loyalty and human kindness.

CHAPTER 4

GENRE

The film belongs to the emotional drama genre, with strong themes of hope, friendship and unexpected help. The emotional impact is created by gradually moving the audience from disappointment to hope rather than showing the happy outcome immediately. The story begins with struggle and loneliness and slowly becomes warm and inspiring.

The emotion is maintained by presenting the events honestly and simply. The audience feels Arun's frustration when his friends avoid him and feels relief when someone finally offers to help. This encourages the audience to stay connected with the character until the end.

The major emotional elements used in the film are:

- Unanswered messages and rejection emails
- Friends who avoid helping
- Loneliness and disappointment
- A surprise meeting after many years
- Honest conversation without judgement
- A sincere offer of help
- The nervous wait for interview results
- Tears of happiness
- A message of gratitude and helping others

CHAPTER 5

OBJECTIVES

The main objective of the project is to create an engaging and meaningful short emotional drama using basic film-making techniques and a simple production setup. The project also aims to demonstrate how camera work, lighting, editing and sound can be combined to create a particular mood and emotional response.

The specific objectives are:

- To develop an original short-film story.
- To understand screenplay and scene development.
- To practice camera framing and shot composition.
- To use lighting to establish mood.
- To create emotion through acting, editing and sound.
- To develop basic video editing skills.
- To understand the importance of background music and sound effects.
- To adapt the story into a radio podcast format.
- To understand the difference between visual and audio storytelling.
- To convey a positive social message about friendship and helping others.

CHAPTER 6

STORY DEVELOPMENT

The story was developed around the simple idea that a person who has been forgotten by many can still be remembered by one. The initial concept was kept simple so that the emotion could be developed gradually without requiring a large cast or expensive locations.

The first part establishes the character and his current situation. Arun is shown as a hardworking young man who keeps trying despite repeated rejection. The phone calls to his friends allow the audience to understand how alone he feels. This creates the emotional need for the turning point.

The final part was developed to raise the emotional level step by step. First, Arun faces disappointment when his friends walk away. Then a familiar voice calls his name at the bus stop. After that, he honestly shares his struggle and receives real help. The montage shows the second chance becoming reality, and the final conversation between Arun and Karthik provides the emotional conclusion and the moral of the film.

CHAPTER 7

STORY SYNOPSIS

The story follows a young man named Arun who is struggling to find a job after repeated rejection. He walks alone through the city with a file containing his resume. When he checks his phone, he sees several unanswered messages and rejection emails. Tired and disappointed, he sits on a bench. In his inner voice he says that he kept trying and hoped that one call would change his life.

In the evening, Arun goes to a small tea shop and calls an old friend, asking if there are any job openings. The friend replies that he does not know of anything and promises to tell him if he hears something. Arun tries another friend and receives a similar response. He slowly puts his phone down, feeling that when he needed someone, everyone had a reason to walk away.

Later, while Arun is walking through a crowd near a bus stop, someone calls his name. He turns around and finds his college senior, Karthik. They recognize each other after many years. Karthik notices that Arun's smile hides something and asks him to speak honestly. Arun explains that he is still looking for a job and that nothing has worked out.

Karthik listens without judging and offers to help. He asks Arun to send his resume and says that he knows a place that is hiring and will try to arrange an interview. Arun is surprised and thanks him, but Karthik tells him that there is no need for thanks; he only has to keep going.

A montage shows Arun updating his resume, Karthik forwarding it to the company, Arun attending the interview and waiting nervously outside. His phone rings and he hears the good news. He smiles with tears in his eyes.

In the final scene, Arun meets Karthik again at sunset after getting the job. He says he will never forget the help given when nobody else came forward. Karthik replies that one day someone else will need Arun's help and that he should be there for them. They smile and shake hands. Karthik walks away, and Arun looks forward with new hope.

CHAPTER 8

CHARACTERS

The main character of the film is Arun, a young man who is struggling to find a job. He is initially hopeful and determined, but repeated rejection makes him tired and disappointed. His expressions and reactions are very important because the audience understands the seriousness of his situation mainly through his behaviour. Even when he meets Karthik, he tries to hide his struggle behind a smile before finally speaking honestly.

The second main character is Karthik, Arun's former college senior. He is kind, observant and sincere. He remembers Arun after many years, senses his hidden pain and listens without judgement. Instead of giving only sympathy, he offers real and practical help. Karthik represents the person who never forgot us.

The third group of characters is Arun's friends. They are contacted by phone and do not appear in detail. Their polite excuses show how people may move away when someone needs help. Keeping them as simple voices on the phone keeps the focus on Arun's emotions and highlights the contrast with Karthik's kindness.

CHAPTER 9

SCENE DEVELOPMENT

9.1 Scene 1 – The Struggle

The first scene introduces the main character and establishes his difficult situation. It is set on a city road in the evening. Arun walks alone with a file containing his resume. He checks his phone, where several unanswered messages and rejection emails are visible.

His inner voice says, “I kept trying. Every day I hoped that one call would change my life.” He then sits on a bench, tired and disappointed. The purpose of this scene is to create sympathy for the character. The camera can use wide and medium shots to show Arun alone in the busy city, followed by a close-up of the phone screen and his tired face.

9.2 Scene 2 – Asking for Help

In a small tea shop in the evening, Arun calls an old friend and asks if there are any job openings. He says that anything is fine and that he only needs a chance. The friend replies that he does not know of anything and will inform him if he hears something.

The call ends and Arun tries another friend. The response is similar. He slowly puts his phone down. His inner voice says, “When I needed someone, everyone had a reason to walk away.” This scene deepens the emotional conflict and shows the loneliness of the character. The conversation is kept simple so that the focus remains on Arun’s reaction.

9.3 Scene 3 – The Reunion

Arun walks through the crowd near a bus stop when someone suddenly calls his name. He turns around and sees Karthik, his college senior. They recognize each other after many years and greet each other warmly.

Arun smiles, but his face hides his struggle. Karthik senses this and asks him to tell what is wrong. Arun hesitates and then speaks honestly about his unsuccessful job search. Karthik listens without judging and asks him to send his resume, promising to try to arrange an interview at a company that is hiring. Arun thanks him, and Karthik replies, “You don’t have to thank me. Just don’t give up.”

This is the turning point of the film. Close-up shots of both characters can capture the change from hesitation to relief.

9.4 Scene 4 – A Second Chance

This scene is presented as a montage to show the passing of time and the progress of events. It includes the following moments:

- Arun updates his resume.
- Karthik forwards it to the company.
- Arun attends the interview.
- Arun waits nervously outside.
- His phone rings and he hears the good news.
- Arun smiles with tears in his eyes.

Quick cuts, close-ups of the laptop or phone and background music can be used to show hope building gradually. The final shot of Arun's smiling face with tears creates the emotional peak of the film.

9.5 Scene 5 – The Ending

At sunset on a road, Arun meets Karthik again after getting the job. He tells Karthik that he helped him when nobody else did and that he will not forget it. Karthik replies that one day someone else will need Arun's help and that he should be there for them.

They smile and shake hands. Karthik walks away, and Arun watches him before looking forward with new hope. The film fades out, and the final moral appears on the screen: when everyone leaves us in our hard times, sometimes someone from our past comes back to help us. A true reunion is meeting someone who never forgot us.

CHAPTER 10

CLIMAX AND ENDING

The climax occurs when Arun receives the phone call with the good news after his interview. This moment connects the earlier struggle with the final result. His smile with tears in his eyes expresses the relief, gratitude and happiness that he has been waiting for.

The emotional ending takes place at sunset, when Arun meets Karthik again. The dialogue about helping others in the future turns a personal story into a message for the audience. The kindness that Arun received does not end with him; it becomes a responsibility to help someone else.

The ending is hopeful and complete, but it also leaves the audience thinking about their own relationships. It encourages viewers to remember the people who stood by them and to be there for others in their difficult times.

CHAPTER 11

CINEMATOGRAPHY

Cinematography is used to control how the audience sees the story. In the opening scenes, wide shots can show Arun walking alone in the crowded city, which emphasizes his isolation. Medium shots can be used during the tea shop scene to show his reactions while speaking on the phone.

Close-up shots are particularly useful for showing the phone screen with rejection emails, Arun's tired face and the tears in his eyes during the montage. The reunion scene can use shot–reverse-shot to show the reactions of both characters when they recognize each other. A slow push-in toward Arun's face can be used when he decides to speak honestly.

The camera can remain steady during calm scenes and use gentle movement in the montage to show progress. In the final scene, a wide shot of the two characters against the sunset can be followed by a slow shot of Arun looking forward, giving the audience a sense of hope.

CHAPTER 12

LIGHTING

Lighting plays an important role in creating the mood of the film. The early scenes can use dull, cool evening light to reflect Arun's disappointment and stress. The tea shop can have soft, slightly dim light to create a lonely atmosphere during the phone calls.

When Arun meets Karthik, the lighting can become slightly warmer to show the beginning of hope. During the montage, brighter and cleaner lighting can be used to show progress and confidence.

The final scene uses natural golden sunset light. The warm colours give the film a peaceful and positive ending and support the emotional message of gratitude and new beginnings.

CHAPTER 13

SOUND DESIGN

Sound is one of the most important elements in REUNION because it helps the audience feel the emotions of the character. Normal scenes can include traffic noise, footsteps, crowd sounds, tea shop ambience, phone notification tones and phone ringtones. These sounds establish a realistic environment.

In the struggle scenes, soft and slow background music can be used to create a sad mood. When Karthik calls Arun's name, the background noise can briefly fade so that the voice is clearly heard. During the montage, the music can become brighter and more hopeful. The ringing of the phone before the good news is an important sound moment.

Silence is also deliberately used. A short pause after a friend's refusal or before Arun answers Karthik's question allows the audience to feel the emotion. Important sound elements include:

- Traffic and crowd ambience
- Footsteps
- Phone notification sounds
- Phone ringtone
- Tea shop ambience
- Voice-over narration
- Soft emotional background music
- Uplifting montage music
- Sudden silence

CHAPTER 14

EDITING TECHNIQUES

Editing is central to the emotional flow of REUNION. Simple and smooth cuts can be used in the early scenes to keep the pace natural. The phone calls can use cut-aways between Arun's face and the phone screen so that his disappointment is clearly seen.

The montage in Scene 4 is the main editing sequence. Short clips of the resume update, the forwarding of the resume, the interview, the nervous wait and the phone call can be joined with quick cuts and dissolves to show the passing of time. The tempo of the montage should gradually increase as hope builds.

The voice-over should be carefully synchronized with the visuals. Colour grading can be used to move from cooler tones in the struggle scenes to warmer tones in the final scene. The film ends with a fade-out followed by the moral text and the title card "REUNION".

CHAPTER 15

USE OF PROPS AND LOCATION

The project is designed to be produced using simple locations and easily available props.

The main locations are a city road, a small tea shop, a bus stop and a road at sunset.

The major props required are:

- Mobile phone
- File containing a resume
- Bench
- Tea shop table, chairs and cups
- Laptop (for the resume update in the montage)
- Formal clothes for the interview
- Bus stop or roadside setting

The limited number of props makes the film practical to shoot while allowing the focus to remain on the characters and the story.

CHAPTER 16

RADIO PODCAST ADAPTATION

The same story can be adapted into a radio podcast by removing the visual dependency and replacing visual information with audio descriptions and sound effects.

In the short film, the audience can see Arun looking at the rejection emails on his phone. In the podcast, the same action must be communicated through narration and sound. For example, the narrator can describe that Arun checks his phone while notification tones and a sad background tune are played.

The reunion at the bus stop cannot be shown visually in a podcast. Instead, the crowd sounds can fade out and the voice calling “Arun?” can be heard clearly. The montage can be presented through short narrated lines, phone sounds and rising background music. This demonstrates the importance of sound imagination in radio storytelling.

CHAPTER 17

RADIO PODCAST SCRIPT APPROACH

The podcast version can begin with a narrator describing Arun walking along a busy city road with his resume. Traffic sounds and footsteps can be used in the background, followed by Arun's voice-over.

The phone calls in the tea shop can be presented through voice acting, with the friends' voices slightly filtered to sound like a phone call. The narration should remain slow and emotional during the moments of rejection.

When Karthik calls Arun's name, the background noise can fade suddenly. The conversation between the two characters can then be presented through clear and natural voice acting. During the montage, the narrator can describe the progress while the music becomes brighter.

The final scene can use soft evening ambience and gentle music. After Karthik's last line, the music can slowly fade, leaving a short pause before the final moral is spoken and the podcast ends.

CHAPTER 18

VOICE AND AUDIO PERFORMANCE

Voice acting is important for the podcast version because the audience depends entirely on sound to understand the emotions of the characters.

Arun's voice should initially sound tired and hopeful. During the phone calls it should become quieter and more disappointed. When he meets Karthik, there should be surprise and hesitation, and after receiving help his voice should become warm, emotional and grateful.

Karthik's voice should be calm, friendly and reassuring. The friends' voices should sound polite but distant, as if they are trying to end the conversation. The following elements are important:

- Clear pronunciation
- Appropriate pauses
- Emotional voice modulation
- Different voices for different characters
- Controlled speaking speed
- Appropriate background music
- Effective use of silence

CHAPTER 19

PRODUCTION PROCESS

The production of the project can be divided into three stages: pre-production, production and post-production.

During pre-production, the story idea was developed and converted into a screenplay. The scenes, characters, locations, props and required sound effects were identified. The emotional flow of the story was planned so that it moves from struggle to hope.

During production, the scenes are recorded according to the screenplay. Different camera angles are captured so that there are enough options during editing. Phone screens, close-ups of reactions and the individual montage shots are recorded separately where necessary. Voice recordings for the podcast are also prepared.

During post-production, the recorded footage is organized and edited. Unnecessary portions are removed and the scenes are arranged according to the screenplay. Voice-over, sound effects, background music, on-screen text and colour grading are added. The final video is then exported after checking the complete sequence.

CHAPTER 20

CHALLENGES FACED

One of the major challenges in producing an emotional drama with a simple setup is making the audience feel the character's pain and hope without expensive equipment. Since the story depends on emotion, the acting, camera framing and sound must be used effectively to keep the scenes natural and believable.

Another challenge is shooting in public places such as a city road and a bus stop. Crowd noise, traffic sounds and changing light can affect the quality of the recording, so the timing and location must be planned carefully.

Audio synchronization is another important challenge. Voice-over, phone sounds, background music and dialogue must occur at the correct moments to create the intended emotional effect. The montage also requires careful editing so that the passing of time is clear.

CHAPTER 21

LEARNING OUTCOMES

Through this project, several practical skills can be developed. The project provides experience in screenplay writing, scene planning, camera operation, lighting, acting, sound recording and video editing.

The project also demonstrates the importance of emotion and timing in storytelling. A simple pause, a familiar voice or a quiet smile can sometimes create more impact than a complicated visual effect.

The radio podcast adaptation provides additional experience in voice acting, narration and audio editing. It also demonstrates how the same story must be presented differently depending on the medium.

CHAPTER 22

EXPECTED OUTCOME

The final outcome of the project is a short emotional drama titled REUNION, supported by a radio podcast adaptation of the same story. The film is expected to engage the audience through a gradual transition from disappointment and loneliness to hope and gratitude.

The project demonstrates the practical use of visual storytelling, sound design and editing techniques. The hopeful conclusion and the final moral encourage the audience to value real friendship and to help others in their difficult times.

CHAPTER 23

CONCLUSION

The REUNION project demonstrates how a simple story can be developed into an engaging emotional drama through effective use of film-making techniques. The story begins with a young man's struggle to find a job and gradually introduces hope through an unexpected meeting with his old senior.

The project combines screenplay writing, acting, cinematography, lighting, sound design and video editing. Each element contributes to the emotional impact of the film. The use of simple locations and limited characters also demonstrates that an effective short film does not necessarily require complex production resources.

The radio podcast adaptation further demonstrates how storytelling can be transferred from a visual medium to an audio medium. Elements that are visible in the film must be communicated through narration, dialogue, sound effects, music and silence.

Overall, REUNION provides practical experience in both film making and radio podcasting while demonstrating the importance of creativity, emotion and audience engagement in media production.

“When everyone leaves us in our hard times, sometimes someone from our past comes back to help us. A true reunion is meeting someone who never forgot us.”
